

GENERAL GRANT.

His Condition about the Same as Yesterday.

Chances that He will Live for Some Time.

He was Resting Easy at Last Reports.

HE RELATES HIS DREAM.

New York, April 4, 6:30.—Gen. Grant awoke after a continuous sleep of eight hours, and related in a lucid and humorous manner his dream while under the influence of the anodyne. He feels refreshed and cheerful and asked for a cup of coffee. His pulse is the same.

DR. DOUGLAS,
DR. SHRADY.

A COMFORTABLE NIGHT.

Last night was a comfortable one for Gen. Grant. He slept quietly in his easy chair, with his feet resting on a stool, from shortly before 11 o'clock until 6:30 o'clock this morning. He was much refreshed by the sleep. During the early morning the patient had occasional attacks of coughing. His breathing during the night was comfortable. Dr. J. H. Douglas and Geo. F. Shradly remained with him during the night. Shortly after midnight the outer doors were closed and the lights burning in the upper windows were turned low. The only persons who trod the walks on the block where the Grant residence is located were a score of reporters and three policemen, and they found the rain and mist so disagreeable that the shelter of an opposite doorway was sought.

At 3:30 o'clock the following bulletin, signed by Drs. Shradly and Douglas, was issued:

April 4.—3:30 a.m.—Gen. Grant has slept continuously up to this hour, on a bed of rest, and is free from all attacks of coughing. He has taken nourishment regularly; his breathing is natural and pulse as usual.

Dr. Shradly came out of the house at 7:30 o'clock and walked to Madison avenue when he boarded a down town car. He said that it was nothing more than a miracle that the general should have lived so long and be in the condition he is. Dr. Douglas remained in the sick room while Dr. Shradly was away.

VERY QUIET.

1 p.m.—General Grant has been very quiet since the last report. He has taken his nourishment regularly; his pulse is 72. He is not complaining of his throat; the accumulation of mucus is easily removed by gargling without other medication; he moves from room to room when required with no trouble; he is now resting in his easy chair after having been in his bed for a few moments.

J. H. DOUGLAS, M. D.

STILL IMPROVING.

11:15 a.m.—The improvement in which the last statement suggested in General Grant's condition continues since taking his coffee. He has had strong liquid nourishment twice; the throat has been attended to and the irritation which began to trouble him has been allayed; he walked firmly into an adjoining room to have his mouth and throat cleared; he is resting quietly in his easy chair; his pulse is about as yesterday at this hour.

J. H. DOUGLAS, M. D.

CONFIRMED.

3 p.m.—At a visit to Gen. Grant at 2 p.m. by Drs. Barker, Shradly and Douglas, the general's condition, which has been uniform during the day as portrayed in the statements of 11:45 and 1 p.m., was confirmed. After having his throat attended to Gen. Grant returned to his easy chair.

STEEL ENGRAVINGS.

This afternoon an artist called at General Grant's house. He brought with him several copies of a steel engraving by himself of the general. They were brought for the general to put his autograph on them and the engravings are then to be presented to Senators Chaffee and Stanford. Dr. Newman and the attending physicians, Drs. Barker and Shradly, arrived about 2 o'clock. When Dr. Barker left the house he said that the general was better than he has been in a week. That his throat was easier, and that the mucus was less adhesive and was thrown off much easier.

GETTING RESTLESS.

9 p.m.—General Grant has within the past half hour become somewhat restless, changing his position alternately from chair to bed. He has complained of pain in the throat, which has been relieved by a local application of ice. He has occasionally walked about his room and sat a short time in the library and his pulse remains the same and temperature normal. He has just taken his food and at this moment is inclined to doze in his chair, having had his anodyne administered.

Geo. F. SHRADY.

THE GENERAL'S VISION.

The impression prevails with many that the hypodermic injections of brandy were not only employed to rally Gen. Grant from the death swoon of Thursday morning at daybreak, but that the general had since been sustained almost solely by the use of liquors administered by physicians. This is untrue. On Thursday morning when death was thought to be only five minutes away Dr. Shradly injected one drachm of brandy beneath the skin of the general's right fore arm. Beneficial effects were speedily observed and soon after the operation was repeated, a drachm then being administered with a hypodermic syringe. That was all the liquor then administered and not a drop has been given since. The general has since expressed a conviction that these applications of brandy saved his life at the time. Dr. Shradly returned to the house at 2 p.m. and soon after Dr. Barker drove up. Dr. Douglas had already arrived. After a consultation Drs. Douglas and Barker left. Dr. Barker then said General Grant was better than he had been in a week; that his throat was easier and that the mucus was less adhesive and was thrown off much easier. Between 3 and 4 p.m. he complained of a chill in his room and a wood fire was started in the grate. The easy chair was wheeled near the fire-place and there the general rested with Dr. Shradly and Mrs. Sartoris near by. Callers were comparatively few during the day. Some flowers were sent to the house during the afternoon. In the morning bullet in reference was made to the fact that during the night the general had dreamed and afterwards related his dream to the doctor and his family. The bullet in spoke of this to show the clearness of the general's faculties in being able to recite the details of his dream. The general related his dream soon after he awoke. He said he felt as if he were off traveling somewhere and had but a single satchel; feeling he was poor and he thought he was partly undressed and he had no money. This worried him a good deal. Although he felt him self to be in a pretty bad predicament, with no money and without friends. He came to a fine and got over it very awkwardly, there being a note only on one side. When over he found he had left his satchel on the other side and he could not get it without paying duty at each step of the way as he went back for it. Then he thought he would get back home and borrow money from Mrs. Grant, but when he got there he found that Mrs. Grant had only $17. That was not enough, and the general said he was glad to wake up. While relating this night vision General Grant chuckled with some ill-humor, particularly at that portion where he told how he was obliged to pay duty or leave his satchel.

GENERAL SHERIDAN'S REMARKS.

Philadelphia, April 4.—The Ledger this morning prints, by permission, the substance of some remarks made during a conversation by General Sheridan, at a dinner party in Washington recently. The article quotes General Sheridan as saying: "It is sad to think of General Grant dying under such physical tortures as is inflicted by his terrible disease, and under such mental agony as I know he endures, in consequence of the unfortunate business failure that overwhelmed him and his family. I could never comprehend why the old man (all old soldiers call General Grant the old man) went into business, and particularly why he left himself up in Wall street. From the time he embarked this business notion I have always thought General Grant was off his base and had lost that abundance of caution that has characterized all his movements. I have listened to him talk

ABOUT MAKING MONEY.

in perfect amazement. He imagined that he had talent for making money and that his sons all possessed this talent in a remarkable degree. He seemed very reticent in talking about this when we were so situated as to be free from interruption and when we could talk with freedom of bygone days. Now, I know very well that General Grant did not possess talent or genius for making money. His nature is too generous and confiding for that. His talent in connection with money was in an opposite direction, and caused him to get clear of money in a very short time. He could never keep money before he set up in Wall street, and you know he is a very bright fellow who can keep money after he gets there. What most surprised me, however, was that the old man should talk so much about this newly discovered talent. He talked persistently, and Grant always talked well when he felt free to talk about accumulating a large fortune, and I noticed

HIS EARNESTNESS OF MANNER.

I sometimes thought that I understood him in this particular, still I could not entirely divest myself of the apprehension I felt on his account and his very persistency and earnestness added to my fears. Why, I never knew Grant to talk about the great abilities which he did possess, and which the world has recognized. No one ever heard him talk about his great military talent or boast about his splendid achievements in the field, and yet Grant knew he had extraordinary abilities in this direction, because his successful movements and the brilliant and decisive results that attended them showed him this. Indeed Gen. Grant had greater talent for conducting campaigns and fighting armies than he was really worth of. Nobody, however, ever heard him talk about in this direction, and the simple fact that he de-canted to me with so much earnestness and frequency on his money-making talents, struck a suspicion in my mind that his previously strong mental forces were breaking up, and that he was rapidly moving away from his previously well established lines of prudence and safety." Later in the evening the lieutenant general spoke of the reluctance with which General Grant left the army to become president of the United States. "You have seen statements," said Gen. Sheridan, "to the effect that the old man laid plans to secure the nomination for the presidency in 1868. There is no foundation for such statements, and I know whereof I speak. I know what his feelings and desires were at that time touching his future. He wanted above all things to remain with the army, which he loved and whose idol he was, and is still, and had no ambition whatever to become president. He doubted his ability to discharge the duties of president, but above all he has no taste or inclination for political office."

WHAT HE POSSESSED.

A Lucky Heiress.

Chicago, April 4.—Mrs. Thomas Meath of this city, received a letter to-day from her brother, Wm. Sheridan, an ex-member of parliament, residing at Dunmore, Ireland, informing her that she had been awarded the greater portion of a fortune of $900,000. Mrs. Meath had a cousin married to General Lawrence Blake, of the British army, who died in 1876. He left a will bequeathing his estate to his wife, who died intestate. The estate has since been in the English courts, but a decision has finally been given in favor of the wife's heirs. Vote for T. B. Anderson for mayor.

NO MORE TROOPS WANTED.

Colonel-general Adamson, at Panama, in answer to an inquiry, to-day telegraphed Secretary Whitney that the force of marines sent yesterday from New York will be sufficient to protect American interests at Panama. The secretary will not, therefore, order an additional force to Aspinwall Monday. ZALDIVAR.

In relation to the interruption of transportation across the isthmus of Panama of mails for the west coast of South America, Postmaster-General Vilas to-day said the mails were in the hands of the American consul at Panama and he had no doubt would be safely transported. It was the duty of Secretaries Endicott and Whitney to restore communication. The postoffice department did not intend to take mail across the isthmus and let the army and navy follow.

Commissioner Sparks, of the land office, to-day said, in explanation of an order issued by him yesterday, suspending action upon the pre-emption timber culture and desert land entries, "a number of Western states and territories that the department had reason to believe general, a number of fraudulent entries had been made and he wished to thoroughly investigate matters. The suspensory order applies particularly to the portions of country covered by vast cattle ranches, as the commissioner suspects these ranches have been greatly extended through fraudulent entries of public lands. President Cleveland has had a consultation with Secretary Lamar in reference to the status of the Winnemago reservation settlers. No conclusion was reached, and a further conference will be held. It is believed the department apprehends serious trouble if the government should attempt to eject the settlers. Vote for T. B. Anderson for mayor.

The Ameer Invited to London.

London, April 4.—The cabinet, at a council to-day, approved the agreement made between the Ameer of Afghanistan and Earl Dufferin.

Abduraman's expression of a desire to visit England having been reported by the earl to the government, the viceroy has been instructed to invite the Ameer to come to London as guest of the crown. The cabinet, at a session this afternoon, had under consideration the acceptance of England's proposals concerning the Afghan boundary line, as sent to Earl Granville by Prime Minister DeGiers for Russia. Russia's response cannot be deemed anything more than a provisional acceptance. The English embassy at Tashkent, Persia, reports that large masses of Russian troops continue to pass through Tiflis southward. The English consul at Batoum makes similar reports.

The latest advices estimate the number of Russians already stationed in a line between Bakou and Sarakh at least 65,000, the nature of the response DeGiers to the English proposals makes it necessary to prolong the period of the correspondence between the two powers on the Afghan question, before the joint commissioner can undertake a settlement. Vote for T. B. Anderson for mayor.

An Infernal Machine.

Joliet, Ill., April 4.—An infernal machine was found in the new court house this morning. The machine was composed of a box filled with a composition of giant powder and nitro-glycerine. The fuse had burned to the edge of the box but there had ceased. The placing of the machine in the court house is ascribed to striking quartermen, but to evidence implicating any one has been discovered. The owners of the quarries brought men to fill the places of the strikers and the Joliet Stone company put a squad at work in one of their quarries. This morning a large body of strikers, approaching three officers of their company, attempted to stop their progress by drawing revolvers, but the strikers pressed by them without any shots being fired and drove away the new men. Warrants were issued for the arrest of three or four of the leaders. Vote for T. B. Anderson for mayor.

A Fiendish Uncle.

Chicago, April 4.—Three years ago Frederick Heldt, a wealthy Milwaukee contractor, went to Germany, taking with him his 17-year-old niece, Minnie Heldt. They were gone three years. While abroad it is said they traveled together as man and wife, and on the ocean, en route home, a child was born to the girl. On returning home three months ago, Heldt installed her at his residence, No. 648 Illinois avenue, where he has a wife and three children, and represented that she had been married and that her husband had died.

The neighbor, suspecting that his story was untrue, communicated with the girl's mother and brother at Clinton, Iowa. They arrived at Milwaukee last Friday, and Heldt innocently fled. While in Germany Heldt married an old maid of his, to whom he had been engaged when young, was acting as governess in a family in London. He wrote to her from Milwaukee, inclosing his photograph and telling her that if he would come to Milwaukee he would marry her. She did so, only to learn that he had a wife and family. Fiendish and detestable, she sought work among the neighbors, and they raised a purse to send her back to her London friends.

A letter which Heldt wrote to his wife on Wednesday, intercepted by the Milwaukee detectives, located him at No. 443 Wells street, this city, as Hugo F. Herder. Following the information, Heldt was tracked to the Chicago postoffice to-day, arrested, and taken to Milwaukee to-night to answer the combination of charges him. He had upon his person when arrested a revolver and a murderous looking dirk knife. He is about 50 years of age. The mother was so overcome by the recital of her daughter's misfortune that reason left her and she is now a raving maniac. Vote for T. B. Anderson for mayor.

Russia's Reply.

London, April 4.—The Pall Mall Gazette this afternoon states that the reply of Russia to England's proposals concerning the Afghan frontier line dispute is most conciliatory. The Russians earnestly wish the joint commission would commence the work of settling the frontier as soon as possible. They accept the principle of the definition of a zone of survey but instead of drawing the southern boundary of the zone at what they consider the north line of the frontier of Afghanistan, which is an imaginary line drawn across the desert of Steppe, they propose that the line of the zone survey be carried up to only the natural line of demarcation existing, namely, the Balkus Spur of the Pamirs. The difference between the English and the Russian proposals, the Pall Mall Gazette says, is that the zone proposed by Russia would include a triangular piece of Steppe, twenty to fifty miles wide, which would be excluded from the zone of survey within which the English propose to confine the work of the boundary commission. Vote for T. B. Anderson for mayor.

Pining for Home.

London, April 4.—General Wolseley has forwarded to the war office a significant report made out by the medical staff attached to the Khartoum expedition. The subject of the report is the result of exposure to the desert heat to the British troops stationed along the borders of the Sudan desert. The report states that if the present British military stations in the Sudan be maintained, fully one-half the troops will die or be disabled by the heat before autumn. The who e tone of this peculiar report which was undoubtedly directly inspired by General Wolseley himself, indicates that a decision having been reached to that effect the public is being prepared to witness an early withdrawal of the whole British force from the Sudan to Egypt, and a complete abandonment of the Nile-Khartoum expedition. It is announced that Gen. Graham has been ordered by the government to at once open peace negotiations with Osman Digna or the Sheikhs between Suakim and Berber, possessing the power to control the natives. It is stated that General Graham has been instructed to secure such terms as will enable him to evacuate the whole country at once. Whether it was in pursuance of these particular instructions General Graham to-day withdraws his whole force back from Suakim and Suakim leaving only a small contingent at McNeill's zeriba, it is believed that no operations will be undertaken against Tamaheh. The heat is practically intolerable in the desert west of Tamaheh which is itself almost beyond the influence of the water of the Nile. The officers and men of General Stewart's forces are completely disgusted over the negative results of the expedition and are all anxious to be at once called home. The disgust of the magnificent fellows who have come from Australia to help the mother countries' prestige is simply supreme and indescribable. Vote for T. B. Anderson for mayor.

Anderson for mayor.
